

THE SPRINGBOARD

Springwood II's Monthly Newsletter

MARCH 2023 SUPPLEMENTAL EDITION

On February 21st Raul Ramirez forwarded the following essay to me to be put in the Springboard:

“I would like to take this time to apologize for diminishing the work of the previous board had done on the roofing situation. When the insurance companies changed how they value replacement of the roofs, the board was thrown into deep water. The situation was not easy to maneuver. At that time, the board suggested several options to address the crisis. The subject of a roof reserve was floated, with an increase of $80 added to the Dues. That was not well received by the residents. Options were limited. Which has lead us to our current insurance situation. I apologize for not acknowledging the efforts of the previous board.” Raul Ramirez

This was the first Springboard I had attempted to edit. The Springboard pages were almost completely full at that time. I edited Raul’s submission incorrectly to fit it in the space left as follows:

“I would like to take this time to apologize for apparently diminishing the work of the previous board had done on the roofing situation. When our insurance was significantly increased the situation and solutions were difficult to maneuver. The decision of the board unfortunately caused unexpected financial strain on many residents. I apologize for not acknowledging the efforts of the previous board.” Raul Ramirez

I should have said the increase in insurance caused financial strain on many of our residents.

I failed to put the submission on the front page as Raul was unaware of that requirement and therefore did not mention it to me.

I hope this will clear up any misconceptions about why the “apology” did not appear on the first page and why it was edited incorrectly.
